You are warned that Slippage may occur when trading in financial instruments. This is the situation when at the time that an Order is presented for execution, the specific price showed to the Client may not be available; therefore, the Order will be executed close to or a number of pips away from the Client's requested price. So, Slippage is the difference between the expected price of an Order and the price the Order is actually executed at. If the execution price is better than the price requested by the Client, this is referred to as positive slippage. If the executed price is worse than the price requested by the Client, this is referred to as negative slippage.

A Slippage is a normal element when trading in financial instruments. Slippage often occurs during periods of illiquidity or higher volatility (for example due to news announcements, economic events, and market openings and other factors) making an Order at a specific price impossible to execute. Your Orders may not be executed at declared prices. Slippage may appear in all types of accounts we offer. It is noted that Slippage can occur also during Stop loss or Take Profit Orders, and other types of Orders.

We cannot guarantee the execution of your Pending Orders at the price specified. . However, we assure you that your order will be executed at the next best available price from the price you have specified with your pending order. The resulting Slippage is always subject to market conditions at the time of the execution and the Company has no power of controlling the executed price.

The Company carries out certain quality checks using in-house tools to monitor slippage including, inter alia, the symmetry of slippage, the number of trades that have been subjected to slippage and comparison of the average speed of execution against market standards in order to ensure that the speed and likelihood of execution have remained within acceptable ranges.
